

ABSTRACT

The invention provides an electro-optical device including pixels disposed in a matrix at intersections of a plurality of signal lines and a plurality of scanning lines. Each of said pixels includes sub-pixels that are each provided with a static random access memory and an electro-optical element.